NATIVE ART FOR NATIVE RIGHTS! "Visions for the Future" Brings Together Two Generations from Indian Country

BOULDER, CO-On Saturday, November 18th, members of one of the oldest and most respected advocacy organizations in Indian Country will join artists of today's hip-hop generation to celebrate Native American Heritage Month by raising awareness about the pressing issues facing Indian tribes.

In honor of the Boulder-based not-for-profit organization, Native American Rights Fund, a collective of contemporary Native artists, experimental filmmakers, musicians and more will promote the vivid emergence taking shape in the American Indian Art industry. The exhibit "Visions for a Future: Boulder" will feature provocative works rarely displayed in the Boulder area that resemble the mission and movement of NARF into the 21st Century.

Proceeds collected from the event will go towards supporting the 501 (c) 3 organization that hails executive leadership by John Echohawk (Pawnee). Come celebrate the local flavor of Native America in one of the hippest and most thoughtful ways!
